Welcome!

WE'RE THRILLED TO BE BACK ON THE FOURTH OF JULY!

Welcome to Seward for the 94th running of the Mount Marathon Race, the oldest and zaniest mountain race in North America!

After three long years, we're thankful to again hold the race and the festival on the Fourth of July. We're returning to "normal" operations in 2022 with one basic stipulation: Please don't attend if you've recently tested positive for COVID-19 or have symptoms of it.

We're returning to our regular start times of 9 a.m. for juniors, 11 a.m. for the first adult race (men this year) and 2 p.m. for the second adult race (women this year). And don't forget the irresistible Mini Mount Marathon for 2-6-years-olds starting at 11:08 a.m.

If you've never watched from the base of the mountain at the end of Lowell Canyon Road, this might be the year, as announcer Adam Verrier has been added to engage and inform spectators. This year's roster includes a record number of lottery winners and first-time racers. Help give them a Mount Marathon welcome they'll never forget!

This guide features an event schedule, Fourth of July Festival info, great photos, and rosters with bib numbers for each race — not to mention articles about back-of-the-packer Corbin Stirling, a remarkable comeback story about Kneeland Taylor, and how Seward's Olive Jordan made the podium last year at age 11.

Whether you're a hardened Alaskan, a first-time visitor to Seward, a newbie racer or a veteran of dozens of Mount Marathons, we're stoked you're here and wish you and your families an amazing experience.

RACE START TIMES

9:00 A.M.—JUNIORS' RACE
(BOYS AND GIRLS START AND RACE TOGETHER)

11 A.M.—MEN'S RACE

2 P.M.—WOMEN'S RACE

Adult racers start in three waves three minutes apart.

FUN FACT

The women's and men's race start times alternate annually. In even-numbered years, the women's race is the last event of the day. In odd-numbered years, the men race last.

Spectator Tips

With three races throughout the day, you'll have plenty of time to see the race from different vantage points. You can watch the start and finish on Fourth Avenue, or head to Jefferson Street and see how racers tackle the base of the mountain. For those who want to do some climbing of their own, spectators are invited on the trail, but please take the HIKING TRAIL, which starts at the intersection of First Avenue and Monroe Street.

Wherever you watch, be sure to obey race officials and volunteers. And definitely STAY OFF THE RACE TRAIL. Racers have trained hard for the Mount Marathon Race; don't be the person who messes up their day.

No Dogs Allowed

For the safety of all runners and spectators, NO DOGS, leashed or unleashed, are allowed in the downtown area or along the race course. This includes all race trails on the mountain.

No Drones Allowed

Please refrain from flying unpermitted drones along all race trails on the mountain and throughout downtown Seward across the entirety of the holiday weekend.

Festival Fun

Fuel up before the race with some delicious food, pick up a souvenir to congratulate a racer, or try on a new pair of trail running shoes after being inspired by our runners!

The 2022 Seward July 4th Festival begins Friday, July 1, with some vendors and booths at Adams St. and Fourth Ave. opening at noon. Festival activities continue through 6:00 p.m. on Monday, July 4.

VENDOR BOOTH SCHEDULE

Friday, July 1: 12 PM – 6 PM (some vendors)
Saturday, July 2: 10 AM – 7 PM (all vendors)
Sunday, July 3: 10 AM – 7 PM (all vendors)
Monday, July 4: 9 AM – 6 PM (all vendors)

Find a map and more festival and vendor info on pp. 26-27.

Kids Corner

The Seward Chamber of Commerce is excited to go back to its roots and has a variety of family and community-oriented events all weekend long! You don't have to be racing to get a little competitive in Seward this Fourth of July!

Be sure to stop by Church Street on Saturday and Sunday, and see what family activities are planned for the day.

Scan and click this QR code with your smartphone to see the most updated calendar of events for the holiday weekend, and where to find all the action on Saturday and Sunday.

Getting Around Town

Visitors are encouraged to carpool or enjoy a scenic train ride from Anchorage to reduce the amount of traffic in town around the Fourth of July. Once here, hop on our free shuttle—maps are available at the Visitor Center—call a taxi, or rent a bike to get around. If you do have a car, park legally and avoid blocking private driveways.

For summer 2022, the City of Seward Free Shuttle will operate from 10:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m. with the first and last stops being at the Seward Railroad Depot. The 5-mile route takes about 30 minutes for the shuttle to complete. Be sure to look for the Seward City Tours bus with FREE SHUTTLE printed in red, and to use the designated shuttle stops.

Seward is compact and easy to navigate. The majority of activities and attractions are found within one mile of the boat harbor, so walking and biking—especially along the waterfront path—are quite feasible. Many hotels, lodges, and tour operators offer complimentary shuttles.

Women's Race Preview

If hometown hero Hannah Lafleur is going to win a third Mount Marathon, she'll likely have to repeat the feat of her 2021 and 2019 victories by chasing down exceptional climbers who have built a substantial lead.

Last year, Rosie Frankowski, an Olympic Nordic skier who trains with Alaska Pacific University, put 2½ minutes on Lafleur with one of the fastest climbs in history only to see it evaporate after Lafleur ran the third-fastest women's downhill ever of 11 minutes, 44 seconds. Lafleur also had to chase down and then hold off Ruby Lindquist of Moose Pass, who nearly won with a breakout performance.

This year's field of ascenders looks to be even stronger with the addition of Olympian Novie McCabe from Washington and Coloradoans Allie McLaughlin and Salomon-sponsored Bailey Kowalczyk, all of whom possess serious climbing chops.

"I am excited and honored to be a part of such an inspiring field of women," Lafleur said.

She respects the climbing prowess of the competition but reminds fans that Mount Marathon goes up and down.

"I imagine there are some incredible uphill engines. But the race is never over until you get to the Yukon Bar!" said Lafleur, a kayak company manager and guide. "The variety of skill sets it takes is what makes this race so special."

Back to those uphill engines. There's Frankowski, who will be a threat if she continues to improve her downhill. And McLaughlin holds the coveted fastest known time on the Incline in Manitou Springs, Colo., a steep and popular route up a former cog railway. She also has won the Pike's Peak Ascent twice and last fall won the competitive Vertical K race and 52-kilometer events on consecutive days at the Broken Arrow Skyrace in California.

"My goals are to go as fast as I can and still be able to run the next day," said McLaughlin, adding that she shies away from the "real edgy" terrain in Colorado but has been targeting Mount Marathon with more specific training this spring.

McLaughlin has been waiting to race Mount Marathon for more than two years -- she was registered for the canceled 2020 race and chose to defer last year.

"It feels like more than a running race to me — like an extreme sport," said McLaughlin, who also enjoys a different extreme recreational activity: Skydiving.

Meanwhile, the 20-year-old McCabe — a teammate of Alaskan Luke Jager at the University of Utah — is coming off a successful Winter Olympics in China, where she placed 18th in the 30K freestyle. Her best result last season was 7th in the final stage of the Tour de Ski in Italy, which finishes with a brutal climb up an Alpine ski hill.

McCabe watched the 2021 Mount Marathon in person and that inspired her to race this year.

"Unconventional running races like this are always super exciting, so I'm stoked to get to participate," said McCabe, whose Olympic teammate Sophia Laukli was also registered for Mount Marathon but withdrew due to a ski schedule conflict.

The depth of this year's field is phenomenal. Only 60 women have run faster than one hour in the 94-year history of the race and 25 of them are entered this year (though some are past their prime). In 2021, fourteen women broke the one-hour barrier, a mark that could be bested this year with nine of the top 10 returning along with many other stellar entrants.

They include two-time champion Christy Marvin of Palmer, now 41. She's never finished outside the top 3 in eight races and possesses a downhill nearly on par with Lafleur's.

Lurking amid the chatter is Lindquist, who wrapped up her senior season of track and field at Black Hills State University in South Dakota before returning to Seward to prepare for Mount Marathon.

"After last year's race, I learned that there is no reason I shouldn't be trying to race with the top women in the field," said Lindquist, who has been formulating a mountain-focused training plan with Erik Johnson, Seward's perennial top 10 men's performer. "I think adding new competition and bringing back great competitors will only motivate me to prepare well and be ready for an awesome race!"

Junior Race Preview

Olive Jordan could hardly believe her ears when told she was needed at the 2021 junior girls podium ceremony.

Her legs, lungs and heart had done extraordinary work, powering the 11-year-old from Seward to a 12-minute improvement from her rookie effort in 2018.

What's more, with the 2021 race featuring seven waves of 50 runners as a COVID-19 mitigation measure, Jordan started in the final wave due to her age and had to pass many runners with a head start on her. Upon finishing, she had no idea how well she'd actually done – fifth place.

"I knew I did my personal best, but I didn't know it would be that good," Jordan said May 26 while on vacation with family on Cape Cod.

Making the podium wasn't even an afterthought.

"My goal was to beat two boys that beat me last time," Olive said, adding that she successfully did so.

Olive's mother, Christy, was also surprised.

"I thought she won her age group but at least 20 teenagers had crossed before her (due to the wave start)," she said.

Olive trained on Mount Marathon about once weekly last year. Christy knew Olive was in shape but just how fit was a mystery.

"We hadn't practiced with timing her so had no idea about time. I knew she was faster than me," said Christy, who ran the women's race.

Olive spent less time on the mountain this year due to running track at school and being stranded on Lowell Point, where her family lives, after a massive landslide closed Lowell Point Road for several weeks. However, she planned to train on Mount Marathon for almost a month after returning from the East Coast.

With 2021 junior champ Lucy Young aging up to the women's race, the top returner is 2021 runner-up Jayna Boonstra of Kenai, the 16-year-old daughter of four-time men's champion Todd Boonstra. Rose Conway of Anchorage (third last year) also figures to be in the mix.

For the boys, the race is shaping up to be a duel between defending champion Ali Papillon, 16, of Boulder, Colo., and Coby Marvin, 15, of Palmer. Papillon, a former Alaskan, ran 28:16 last year to top Marvin by 23 seconds.

Third-place Bayden Menton of Oregon and fourth-place Brady Burrough of Anchorage have aged up to the men's race.

This year's junior race will return to a mass start of nearly 300 runners at 9 a.m.

All 57 girls and 54 of the 69 boys who entered the lottery gained spots in this year's event.

Men's Race Preview

Records abound at the 2022 men's Mount Marathon.

David Norris, boasting the overall record, plans to defend his title.

Max King of Oregon is back and looks to challenge Norris, while also targeting the 40-49 age-group mark.

Octogenarian Fred Moore expects to extend his consecutive race streak to an astounding 52 years.

Chad Resari, now 86, aims to up his oldest finisher mark by another year.

And Taylor Turney, or some other downhill demon, seeks to clock the first sub-10-minute downhill.

Norris is a tough guy to beat, with three wins in three tries at Mount Marathon, including his record run of 41 minutes, 26 seconds, in 2016. A longtime elite Nordic skier with Top 20 results at the World Championships, Norris is shifting his focus to trail and mountain running this summer.

"I'm giving running a higher priority this summer, but that doesn't mean I'll be hanging up my skis next winter," said Norris, whose schedule includes the famous Sierre-Zinal event in Switzerland and the Pike's Peak Ascent in Colorado.

One wildcard is how well Norris recovers from a bruised heel caused by a mountain bike fall in May that forced him to cancel a racing trip to Spain.

Norris and King have only gone head-to-head once, and Norris said afterwards that King made him suffer even more than the year he set the record. Norris held off King by 20 seconds in 2018, but it took a time of 42:13.

King, now 42, recognizes a repeat of that rookie run is unlikely, but he's not conceding anything — even if he's lost a step.

"My goal is hope David is there and go for the win, or a 40-49 age group record, whichever comes first. Or both? Or neither? Anyway it shakes out it's going to be a blast," King said.

Trond Flagstad set the 40-49 age group mark of 44:26 in 2012.

The race returns to the Fourth of July for the first time since 2019. The 2020 event was canceled and the 2021 race was moved to July 7 as a pandemic mitigation measure.

Large crowds are expected with the event on a holiday Monday. "July 4th race day atmosphere in Seward is hard to beat," Norris said.

Canadian Sam Hendry (a distant second to Norris last year) and Darren Thomas of Nevada (third) also return after stellar rookie runs in 2021.

"I prefer not to know who I'm racing and just race my hardest," Thomas said. "I learned (last year) I have to take a few more risks on the downhill and work more (in training) on really high-intensity uphill instead of longer grinds."

The men's field returns nine of last year's Top 10, with only Colorado's Dakota Jones absent.

This year's podium will be fiercely contested with the likes of Alaskans Michael Connelly (fourth in 2021), Lyon Kopsack (fifth), Lars Arneson (sixth), Ben Marvin (eighth), Erik Johnson of Seward (ninth) and Pyper Dixon, of Seward (10th). This year also marks the return of 2022 Olympian Luke Jager, along with Matt Shryock and Adam Jensen.

Meanwhile, Turney has careened downhill in 10:01 and 10:04 the last two races and is aiming to break the descent record of 10:00 by Eric Strabel (2013).

The old-timers are still making their mark, too.

Fred Moore, now 82, began his Mount Marathon career in 1970 and hasn't missed a race since; he posted a solid time of 1:30:17 last year, beating some racers less than half his age.

Everett Billingslea and "Crazy" Bill Carroll look to collect their 40th finishes this year, joining Moore, Braun Kopsack and Flip Foldager in an exclusive group.

And then there's Resari, now closer to age 90 than 80. He first ran Mount Marathon in 1964-65, then stopped for 33 years due to teaching, coaching and family obligations. He re-started his Mount Marathon career in 1998 and hasn't looked back.

Ascending the cliff is particularly challenging for him. "I'm so short I can't reach as high as the other guys," he quipped.

Resari could take the "Golden Racer" option of running half the course and still getting a finish, but chooses to go all the way up and down. How long will Resari keep at it?

"As long as, God willing, that I'm able to do it," he said.

Lottery Winners & Rookies

By Matias Saari

Jesse Brady first applied for the Mount Marathon Race lottery around 2015 while living in Anchorage. Not surprisingly, he lost. The next year, the race committee instituted a weighted lottery where every failed attempt garners an extra lottery ticket the following year. He lost again. Repeat, repeat, repeat, repeat.

Brady, having moved to California where he works as an aerospace engineer, finally won the chance in 2022 to run one of the most popular, alluring, dangerous and oldest races in the country. He was the only person with a weight of six among the more than 800 lottery contestants.

The wait paid off.

"It makes it that more special after waiting seven years to get in," said Brady, who ran cross country and track at Anchorage's former Heritage Christian High School. "It's definitely a big deal. ... I know what a hard race feels like, but it's been 12 years."

Alas, Brady will likely need to wait one more year. He's been plagued by a plantar fasciitis injury so will probably apply for a medical deferral and make his Mount Marathon debut in 2023.

He's been imagining it since college, when he watched friends participate.

"Seeing the mountain evokes strong emotions of intimidation and also wonder," Brady said.

With the increase in lottery spots created by the new Top 50 Percent in Age Group Rule, the roster in 2022 features more than 250 rookies, no doubt a record.

Hailee Rahm of Wasilla is among them. She won the lottery on her third try as the lottery odds for women increased to 43.8 percent in 2022.

Hailee Rahm

"It's one of those epic races that has been on my bucket list," Rahm said. "I get asked a lot if I've done Mount Marathon and I always have to say no."

That won't be the case after this Fourth of July, though.

"Once I'm able to do a few training runs on it, the nerves will subside," she said. "It's a little intimidating to take on something of that magnitude into the unknown."

Rahm preferred hiking until she recognized four or five years ago that it would be faster to just run to the top — and a mountain runner was born. She's used to longer running events and triathlons, so the 5-kilometer Mount Marathon will be more intense for her.

Jacob Case of Fairbanks lost the lottery four times before breaking through this year.

"I'm persistent. I was just going to keep trying," he said, adding that he traveled to Seward every year he lost the lottery to watch the event and support racer friends.

He wasn't bitter about his lottery luck. "You can't run all the races you want to be in," Case said.

Coming from Fairbanks creates its own challenges as the hills there are not nearly as steep or high as in Southcentral Alaska. To compensate, he's been wearing a weight vest while running at Moose Mountain or driving two hours to climb Mount Healy.

Meanwhile, 61-year-old Michael Cooney is not your typical rookie. He began visiting Seward in the 1970s and has lived there or in Moose Pass (his current residence) since 1997. But he's never done the Mount Marathon Race. A skier and sheep hunting guide — but not a mountain runner — Cooney successfully petitioned the race committee in 2022 after losing the lottery several times. His daughter Hana helped provide the motivation.

"She will likely be moving away from Alaska by next summer (and I'm not getting any younger) so this year's race is probably my last good chance to share race day with her as a runner," Cooney wrote in his petition. "I love the history of this race and it would be great to be a part of Seward's and Moose Pass's contribution to that history."

Jennifer Sandvik

By Doyle Woody

Shortly before the calendar turned to 2021, what Mount Marathon veteran Jennifer Sandvik of Eagle River calls a "major life event," which she prefers to hold close, hit her like a boulder tumbling down the mountain.

She lost 30 pounds in six weeks. Her soul was pierced.

Eventually, though, Sandvik resolved to choose fight over flight. She told herself, "I can either make something (good) of it, or not."

Buoyed by the sort of grit and drive that earned her a third-degree black belt in karate, the life-long Alaskan— save three years in Japan — determined to train for Mount Marathon harder than she ever had for her 20 previous Mount Marathons dating back to 1999. Sandvik started running more mileage, including what she laughingly calls "Forrest Gump" long runs in Montana when she visited her oldest daughter, Summer. She started hiking more, and more ferociously. She returned to the workouts that helped forge her excellence in karate. And she leaned on those closest to her for support and encouragement.

A month before last year's Mount Marathon, Sandvik ran the Skinny Raven Twilight 12-kilometer road race, where she discovered she was onto something special. She stunned herself by winning the women's 50-59 age group in 55 minutes, 40 seconds, an average of 7:28 per mile.

"I was like, 'Dang, who is this woman?'" Sandvik said.

That was just a preview of things to come. At Mount Marathon, at 52, she not only slashed a jaw-dropping 9 minutes, 2 seconds off her previous best, but her time of 1:01:58 won the 50-59 age group and placed her 22nd overall. Of the 21 women in front of her, none were less than 10 years younger than her.

"It was shocking and surprising," Sandvik said. "I see the time (at the finish line) and I can't believe it. It was crazy."

Lopping big minutes off personal records gets more difficult the faster a runner gets. Then again, Sandvik has a history of huge PRs. In the eight times she has delivered a PR since her race debut, five came with improvements between 5:13 and 11:31.

Sandvik, who teaches first grade at Eagle Academy Charter School and is also a beekeeper, said she didn't immediately look at the results after the race. She just knew she had bagged a personal best. Later that day, while she was hiking back up the mountain to support friends in the men's race, she received a call from her sister.

"She goes, 'You got 22nd place,' Sandvik recalled. "I'm thinking, 'She is lying. There's no way.'"

Way.

What Sandvik accomplished that magical day, she said, was possible only with the support of her daughters, Summer and Corey, both Mount Marathon vets, and friends like Carolyn Boone-Donan, Claire Connelly and her mountain-racing kids. Friends shared the moment, pre-race, by writing inspirational words on Sandvik's body.

"So much kindness and love," Sandvik said. "I'm really blessed. I'm truly around the best people. People can get through hard times in different ways."

Sandvik will be back in the field again this Independence Day, but she isn't expecting to create fireworks. When you race as fast as she did last year at 52, the next PR is harder to seize.

"I have no delusions," she said. "I'm 53. Who knows? I'm just going to have a good time."

Jennifer Sandvik has earned it.

Nancy Osborne

By Doyle Woody

More than 30 years ago, when Nancy Osborne and her husband Tom taught at Alaska Vocational Technical Center in Seward — the locals call it AVTEC — co-workers talked her into climbing Mount Marathon.

Nancy was a runner. Even so, after climbing and descending the steep 2,974-foot mountain overlooking Resurrection Bay — that grueling ascent and perilous downhill is something of a rite of passage in the seaside town — she wanted no part of the annual Fourth of July race up and down the gnarly peak.

“When I came down, I said, ‘You have to be crazy to run this mountain. Who in their right mind would do this?’” she recalled. But one of her co-workers mused she could do well in the race. Nancy succumbed — the mountain has a way of seducing folks.

So it was that she relented and raced in 1991. She did indeed do well, clocking 1 hour, 18 minutes, 19 seconds, to finish 42nd among women. Also, she was hooked. Mount Marathon does that to folks, gets its claws into them and doesn’t let go.

Now 71 and living in retirement near family in Bellbrook, Ohio, Nancy remains a race regular. She thinks she is ordinary. She is not. Last year, she competed in her 30th consecutive Mount Marathon, a mark topped among women only by Patti Foldager (38 straight), Elyn Brown (38) and Liz Butera (31). Not only that, but in 2021, in Nancy’s debut in the 70-79 age-group, she finished in 1:49:51 to smash the age-group record by 7:11. She has twice finished as high as 31st (1992, 1999).

Nancy likes to say that after three knee surgeries, she keeps competing, thanks to “God’s grace and the chiropractor in Bellbrook.”

Nancy and Tom retired from AVTEC in 2004. Their Alaska roots are strong. Before moving there in 1986, they taught in Kotzebue and Kenny Lake. They have returned to Seward every summer since moving to Ohio in 2017. They work for a cruise-ship company. And Nancy trains on the mountain to recapture her mountain legs. These days in Bellbrook, she is still a runner. She arrives in strong flatlander shape from her training in Bellbrook, where she runs four miles on Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays, then covers six miles on Saturdays.

The crowd of thousands on Independence Day, which can line the last few blocks to the finish four deep, keeps Nancy coming back to the race. Besides, Seward still feels like home.

“The crowd is so supportive, whether you are first or last,” she said. “It is amazing to me. The crowd is just phenomenal. They treat you like a hero, whether you are or not. In my vanity, I must say it’s a wonderful feeling.”

That she is an age-group record-holder astounds her today as much as when she was informed that she had become race royalty.

“I never thought of that, ever,” Nancy said. “I thought, ‘How could that be? I was amazed. I didn’t even know the record. Won’t last long.’”

We’ll see. If there’s one thing Nancy Osborne has shown, it’s that she can last.

Corbin Stirling

By Matias Saari

Despite laboring for nearly two hours up Mount Marathon last July 7, Corbin Stirling was in good spirits. Shirtless and bearing his trademark Mohawk as he approached the turnaround rock, he high-fived a volunteer and did a little dance for the top-of-the-mountain crew.

All the other racers were long gone. David Norris had been crowned champion before Stirling even reached halfway.

No worries. Stirling is not at Mount Marathon to go fast; he's there to have a good time.

Born and raised in Seward, Stirling is unflinchingly proud of his hometown and participating in the Mount Marathon Race.

He started at age 17 and has only missed a few races since.

"It doesn't matter who you are, what place you're in, all that support, it's addicting," he said by phone in May from Palmer, where he was doing a journeyman and plumbing apprenticeship.

Because he has 10-year veterans' status, Stirling doesn't have to worry about losing his spot no matter his speed — or lack thereof. He appreciates the rule that enables him to line up every year on Fourth and Adams as long as he registers on time.

Stirling, 38, earned his 16th finish in 2021, but barely. He reached halfway just 46 seconds before the one-hour cutoff and crossed the finish line in exactly 2 ½ hours. One second slower and his finish would not have been official.

"I got asked if I planned it," Stirling said of his 2:30:00 finish. "I wasn't in a super hurry because I didn't know. I don't wear a watch."

Between 2002-10, Stirling finished in under 90 minutes seven times, with a personal best of 1:11:17 as an 18-year-old rookie.

He's slowed in recent years, preferring to raft, fish and mountain bike instead of run and hike. Some years, race day is his first time of the season up Mount Marathon.

"I'm more into cheeseburgers than running," he admits. "Mount Marathon is the only race I do."

Last year was a bigger struggle than usual so he plans to be "a little" more prepared in 2022.

"I really noticed it right at the bottom," he said. "I'm already getting my ass kicked and haven't even hit the mountain."

If the race had a Clydesdale Division, Stirling would be leading it. He's 6 feet tall and has completed the race three times while weighing more than 300 pounds.

"I don't know if anyone bigger than me has done it," Stirling said.

Concerned that too few new spots were opening up every year and lottery odds were hopelessly low, the race committee enacted the Top 50 Percent in Age Group Rule for requalifying in 2021. Stirling voiced his concern, saying he'd like to see a certain percentage of spots reserved for locals.

"If there's no protection for the residents, my fear is the people of Seward getting drowned out of their own race," he said.

Stirling plans to keep returning every Fourth of July as long as "I hold up and they still let me."

And taking more time to finish can have its perks, as that created one of his fondest race memories when he was handed a large American flag and carried it down the homestretch.

"It must have been one of the first years the men had the early race and as part of the back of the pack, I got to run through the parade coming down Jefferson (Street)," he said. "I got the flag from someone on a firetruck."

Kneeland Taylor

By Doyle Woody

Kneeland Taylor had a plan in 2021. At 73, he would race Mount Marathon for the last time, give himself a final mountain memory to savor, then call it a career before he hurt himself in the perilous Fourth of July race in Seward. And everything transpired terrifically — until his final stride.

Sprinting to the finish line to avoid a last-second pass by hard-charging Gregory Lincoln of Bethel, Kneeland found himself between two timing mats on his final stride. Leaning, lunging forward, arms churning, he slammed to the pavement in the finish chute.

“Last 20 yards,” Taylor recalled, “I’m reckless.”

The good news: Taylor held off Lincoln fractionally — both men were given a time of 2 hours, 3 minutes, 29 seconds.

The grim news: Taylor’s crash resulted in a non-displaced fracture of his right femur near the hip, requiring a five-day hospital stay and months of physical therapy and recovery.

The takeaway: So much for one last sweet memory of the mountain.

The reminder: Intense competition doesn’t only take place at the front of a race.

The look-ahead: Taylor is treating 2022 as the new 2021.

Taylor, 74, will be back on the mountain this year for the 22nd time since his 1997 race debut, intent on seizing one sweet, final race memory.

Taylor, an attorney from Anchorage, approached the finish line last year, on the runners’ right side of the road. He was curious whether he had a firm hold on his finish place. He said his neck was sore, so he could not comfortably look to his left and behind. That’s when he heard spectators encouraging Lincoln: “You can catch him! You can catch him!”

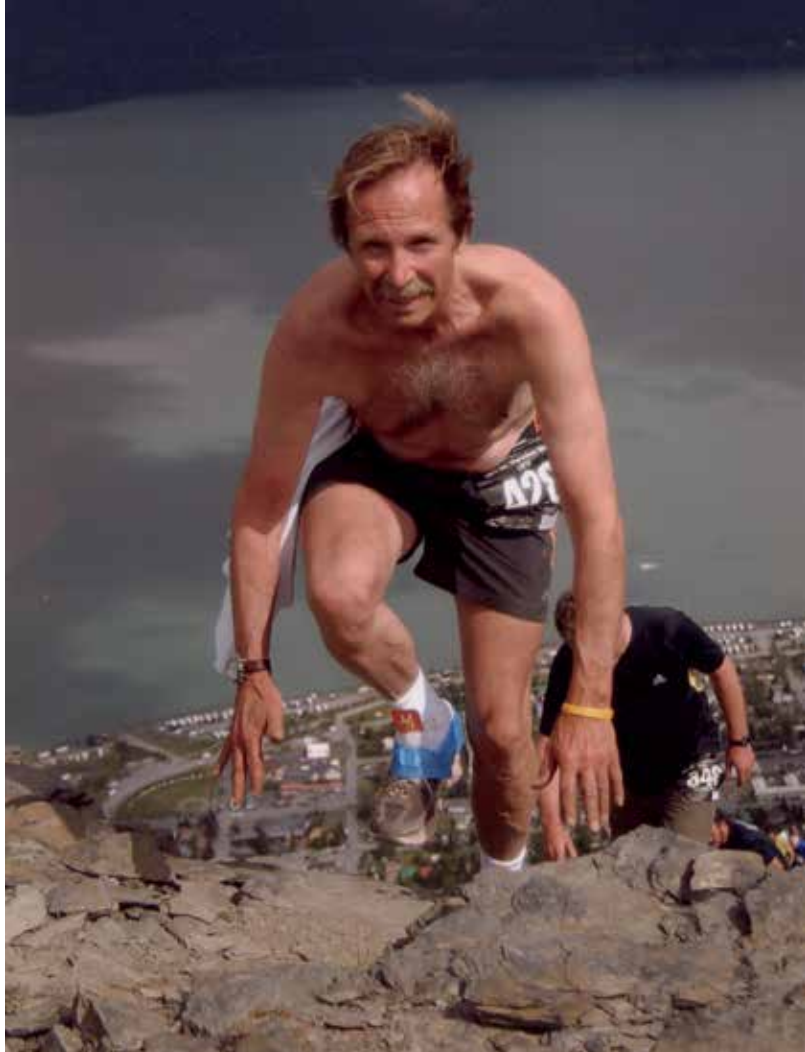

Taylor launched into a sprint just before Lincoln pulled even with him. You know the rest. Taylor and Lincoln, who also tumbled to the pavement, did not touch as they crossed the line. Just bad racing luck for Taylor.

“He was so nice, and apologetic,” Taylor said of Lincoln, emphasizing Lincoln was not at fault.

After sitting on an overturned bucket and getting hosed down in the finish chute, Taylor said he wasn’t in pain — until he tried to stand up. That was a non-starter. Medical personnel at the finish loaded him onto a gurney — now that was painful, Taylor said — and took him to Providence Seward Medical Center, which sits along the course, near the base of the mountain.

He was transported by road later that night to Providence Alaska Medical Center in Anchorage.

Through hard work and the help of a physical therapist and occupational therapist, both friends of his before the injury, Kneeland eventually began riding a stationary bike and was back skate skiing before Thanksgiving.

Taylor grew up hiking with his father in the Adirondacks in upstate New York and bagged several 14,000-foot peaks when he lived in Colorado for five years. He’s also a backcountry skier. Mountains are his thing.

Come the Fourth, he’ll be chasing one more mountain memory. And Taylor has no doubt the thousands of spectators who line the course from downtown and onto the mountain will help make his final journey sweet.

“There’s something about running down the mountain and road and having 10,000 drunks yelling and cheering for you like (you’re) a hero,” he said.

Volunteer Spotlight

VOLUNTEER THANK YOU!

The Seward Chamber of Commerce and the Mount Marathon Race are continually grateful for all the volunteer support that shows up year after year to make our race and festival a huge success.

Thank you the more than 300 individuals, businesses, and groups that take the time to make our community so special. We couldn't do it without you!

Dano and Harold

By Samantha Allen

Behind the fever of Mount Marathon's rosters, rule changes, and race-day operations, a well-oiled machine of local volunteers donate their time to respond to the demands of an ever-changing race. Harold Faust and Dano Michaud are long-standing members of the volunteer backbone who've periodically implemented new procedures to operate an exciting, efficient, and safe Fourth of July.

The race hits especially close to home for Harold Faust, who has lived on Mount Marathon his entire life. After 21 race starts, Harold received his 20-Year Longevity Award in 2021, deciding not to count year he collapsed from heatstroke near the finish. Harold joined the race committee in 1997 following his first race in 1996. Among his many contributions, the building of the finish line clock stand, constructed with an I-beam salvaged from Fred Moore's yard, is one of his proudest. Additionally, Harold coordinates the Bear Mountain repeater placement with Mike Culver from Marathon Helicopters. The team flies up Bear Mountain to assemble a repeater which provides strengthened signal transmission for radio communication on race day. The repeater supplies crucial communication assurance on separate channels for first-aid responders, police, sweep crews, and race officials.

Prior to today's lottery, auctions and petitions, Dano Michaud remembers the days of first-come, first-served race sign-ups. Brian Roberts inspired Dano's racing career when Brian camped overnight at the Chamber of Commerce building to be sure his name was entered on the roster. Dano has been involved with race operations since 2009, serving on the race committee until 2019. Ironically, Dano voted in favor of the Top 225 cut-off rule that knocked him out of the roster in 2012, the same year of Michael LeMaitre's disappearance. In response to the tragedy, Dano designed a mountain safety procedure detailing a sweep plan following each race. This method is still used today, ensuring no lingering racers are left on the course. Dano was also influential in updating and implementing Mid-Mountain Crowd Control, an accident prevention strategy at the cross-section of uphill and downhill racers. Dano has spent many hours assembling the fencing for race day, as well.

The noteworthy contributions of Dano Michaud and Harold Faust have established a safer race environment. Both men agree that the local flair of the Mount Marathon Race is something special and deserving of preservation. We'd like to extend our sincerest thanks to Dano, Harold, and all our hometown volunteers. Here's to doing more, together!

BOAT PARADE

The boat parade starts at 11:00 p.m. on Sunday, July 3rd and travels along the waterfront.

Wave at the vessels as they pass on their journey from the Seward Boat Harbor to the Alaska SeaLife Center and back, and cheer on the captains, crew, and passengers as they put on a show.

This year's theme is "On the Wild Side," so keep your eyes peeled for some extra special wildlife!

FIREWORKS DISPLAY

The midnight fireworks display begins at 12:01 a.m. on Monday, July 4th from the Harbor Uplands.

The 2022 Fourth of July Fireworks Display is presented by JAG Alaska, Harbor 360 Hotel, Gateway Hotel, Major Marine Tours, Firebrand BBQ, Seward Ocean Excursions, the Tufted Puffin, and Sunny Cove Sea Kayaking.

JULY 4TH PARADE

The annual parade begins at 1:00 p.m. on Monday, July 4th.

The streets are cleared, so be sure to stake your claim to a piece of sidewalk along the route through Seward's historic downtown and enjoy the different floats from local groups!

RED WHITE & BLUE GOES GREEN

Recycling containers from Sustainable Seward will be available downtown for festival goers to responsibly dispose of aluminum, plastic and cardboard.

Reusable water bottles and recyclable aluminum water bottles are highly recommended. Fill-up stations are available at several locations around town.

MINI MOUNT MARATHON

The 2022 Mini Mount Marathon Race will begin at 11:08 a.m. on Fourth Ave immediately after the final wave of the men's race starts.

Mini Mount Marathon Race

Created in 1989 by Kim and Skip Reieron as a way to involve their 2-year-old daughter in Seward's Fourth of July festivities, the annual Mini Mount Marathon plants the seeds for new generations of young Mount Marathon racers.

It's open to children ages 2 to 6 and over the past 30 years thousands of children have participated, with many going on to race in the junior and senior divisions.

Today, the mini race is a beloved Fourth of July tradition and one of the most anticipated events of the day. Skip and Kim send nearly 200 kids across the start line each year, a feat that is possible thanks to a dedicated group of partners.

Petro Marine has been a sponsor for the Mini Mount Marathon Race since the beginning, each year supporting the race and providing small toys for the racers. A core group of long-time volunteers makes sure the mini race goes off without a hitch.

FIREWORKS

The midnight fireworks display begins at 12:01 a.m. on Monday, July 4th from the Harbor Uplands, near the Mariner's Memorial. You can spot them from all over town, but some favorite viewing spots include the Waterfront Park, Seward Boat Harbor, or on a boat in the bay.
