See inside for a full list of vendors and a detailed schedule of games and events going on throughout Seward all festival long!

Welcome to Seward for the 97th running of the Mount Marathon Race, which has been entertaining spectators and challenging racers since 1915, longer than any other mountain race in North America!

We're proud to again present the race and Fourth of July Festival.

Start times are 9 a.m. for juniors, 11:05 a.m. for women and 2:05 p.m. for men. And don't miss the Mini Mount Marathon for adorable 2-6-year-olds.

Anywhere on Fourth Avenue or Jefferson Street is a popular place to watch the race (remember, no dogs or drones!), while the base of the mountain at the end of Lowell Canyon Road is also an exciting vantage point.

New this year: a "Jumbotron" near the finish line will show our Livestream broadcast. Those who can't make it to Seward in person can also now tune in for live coverage on KTUU/Alaska's News Source (Channel 2).

This year's roster includes more than 400 lottery winners and 300+ first-time racers. Help give them a Mount Marathon welcome they'll never forget.

This guide features an event schedule, Fourth of July Festival info, great photos and rosters with bib numbers for each race. The previews of all three races will inform you of who all the contenders are. There's also an article about the man who raced Mount Marathon in sandals (!) as well as a tribute piece about running in memory of those who have passed.

Whether you're a hardened Alaskan, a first-time visitor to Seward, a rookie racer or a long-time veteran of the Mount Marathon Race, we're thrilled you're here and wish you and your families an amazing experience.

Spectator tips

With three races throughout the day, you'll have plenty of time to see the race from different vantage points. You can watch the start and finish on 4th Avenue, or head to Jefferson Street and see how racers tackle the mountain base.

For those who want to do some climbing of their own, spectators are invited on the trail, but please take the HIKING TRAIL, which starts at the intersection of 1st and Monroe Streets.

For the safety of all runners and spectators, NO DOGS, leashed or unleashed, are allowed in the downtown area or along the race course. This includes all race trails on the mountain. There are NO DRONES allowed to be flown in and around the race course and downtown unless given prior approval.

Wherever you watch, be sure to obey race officials and volunteers. And definitely STAY OFF the RACE TRAIL. Racers have trained hard for the Mount Marathon Race; don't be the person who messes up their day.

Getting around town

Visitors are encouraged to carpool or enjoy a scenic train ride from Anchorage to reduce the amount of traffic in town around the Fourth of July. Once here, hop on our free shuttle—maps are available at the Visitor Center—call a taxi, or rent a bike to get around. If you do have a car, park legally and avoid blocking private driveways.

For summer 2025, the City of Seward Free Shuttle will operate from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. with the first and last stops being at the Seward Railroad Depot. The 5-mile route takes about 30 minutes for the shuttle to complete. Be sure to look for the Seward City Tours bus with FREE SHUTTLE printed in red, and to use the designated shuttle stops.

Juniors: Flagstad seeks first win, Jordan looks to repeat

Vebjorn Flagstad of Anchorage has won plenty of major running and skiing races, but one title has thus far eluded him: Mount Marathon junior boys champion.

Flagstad, the runner-up the last two years, seeks to change that in his final junior race before aging up to the men's event in 2026.

"I am definitely hungry for a win," said Flagstad, whose father Trond still owns family bragging rights with two wins in the men's race.

Flagstad, 17, ran an exceptionally fast time of 25 minutes, 52 seconds in 2024 while wearing a red USA singlet. The only problem: Palmer's Coby Marvin, holder of the second-fastest time in junior history, was also entered. Unlike 2023, when Marvin got a big gap on the climb to the junior turnaround pole, Flagstad hung close to Marvin the entire way but still finished five seconds behind.

Marvin won't be a factor this year: he's 18 now and making his men's race debut.

"Not having Coby will make it interesting since I will most likely have to lead and pace myself," said Flagstad, who focused on track training this spring and won a state championship in the 3200-meter run before taking a trip to Norway, his father's homeland.

If any returning racers are going to challenge Flagstad, they'll likely have to run several minutes faster than last year.

Also entered are Cedar Ruckel of Indian (third in 28:22 last year), Blaze Rubeo of Wasilla (fourth in 28:24 last year) and Raven Spangler of Palmer (fourth in 2023).

One top newcomer is Nathan Vanderlugt, a talented Nordic skier and mountain runner who lives at Fort Wainwright near Fairbanks. He raised some eyebrows at the 2024 Bird Ridge Hill Climb when he placed 10th overall as a 15-year-old, ahead of many seasoned Mount Marathon adult racers.

Missing from the lineup is Robbie Annett, who was fifth last year. He accomplished a rare feat at the 2025 state high school Division 2 championships by taking the 800-, 1600- and 3200-meter races.

In the junior girls race, it's a good thing for hometown runner Olive Jordan that the race isn't only uphill.

Last year Jordan, then 14, reached the turnaround point in fifth place with a seemingly large deficit of 68 seconds. But she rocketed down the mountain in 8 minutes, 41 seconds to win in 33:59, which was 23 seconds clear of Palmer's Wren Spangler.

"I was surprised, but I do have the local advantage," Jordan said. "So I have a pretty fast downhill and my town cheering me on. ... One reason I'm fast at the downhill is I do downhill skiing which is sort of the same, and helps me not be scared of falling or going too fast."

Being from Seward can be beneficial but also has a drawback for Jordan. "It does make me super nervous," she said. "I feel like I have a lot of pressure but it's also a race I do for fun!"

With the top 12 from last year returning, Jordan should have plenty of competition.

The tiny, blond-haired Spangler is a crowd favorite. As an 11-year-old in 2023 she took third. She climbed to runner-up in 2024 so perhaps she's ready for the top step of the podium, even though she has five years of junior eligibility remaining.

Tania Boonstra of Kenai, the 2023 girls champion, will race for the last time as a junior alongside Hannah Bodkin, the Eagle River racer who led at midway last year.

And don't sleep on another 17-year-old – 2022 champion Rosie Conway of Anchorage. After three straight top-3 finishes from 2021-23, Conway had a down year (for her) by taking seventh last year. She has regained good form in 2025 and won the 1600-meter run at the Alaska Division I track and field championship in May.

"This year is going to be very competitive," Jordan said. "I know some girls really want that first-place spot because it's their last year or they were close to first (in the past)."

Rhodes Rides Momentum As Race Favorite

When 20-year-old Klaire Rhodes secured an auction bib on the eve of the 2018 Mount Marathon Race, she was relatively inexperienced and placed 26th.

The next year she improved to 12th. She cracked the top 5 each year from 2021-23 — but never came closer than two minutes to claiming victory in the oldest and most notorious mountain running race in North America.

At the time, Rhodes’ best results were still coming in ultra- and mid-distance racing — including the 2023 World Trail Running Championships in Austria, where she placed 21st.

So it’s understandable that race pundits didn’t peg her as the Mount Marathon favorite in 2024, considering that the Palmer trio that had gone 1-2-3 the previous year were all back along with two-time champ Hannah Lafleur and standout runner/skier Kendall Kramer of Fairbanks.

Rhodes proved them wrong. She and Kramer ditched everyone else on the 3,000-foot climb to the turnaround point and Rhodes shed Kramer on the perilous descent to become the fourth woman in history to run faster than 50 minutes.

Rhodes’ time of 49 minutes, 49 seconds trails only record-holder Allie McLaughlin of Colorado (47:09 in 2022), Emelie Forsberg of Sweden (47:48 in 2015) and Allie Ostrander, a professional runner from Kenai (49:19 in 2017).

“It was probably the most special result of my running career,” Rhodes told the Anchorage Daily News.

Rhodes, who runs for new Mount Marathon sponsor The North Face, won’t be underestimated in 2025.

She’s having a strong season, and in April she placed third at the Gorge Waterfalls 100K in Oregon (her debut at the 62-mile distance). That result qualified her for September’s World Trail Running Championships in Spain. She also plans to race the Broken Arrow Skyrace 46K in California two weeks before Mount Marathon and a 50K in Switzerland in July, so she hasn’t really been targeting Mount Marathon in her training.

“But I am running and hiking with a lot of vert(ical gain),” she said. “I think fitness is fitness and I have the course experience from the past six years to be able to run a confident race.”

It’s fair to call Rhodes the favorite in a field that remarkably returns last year’s entire top 30 except for a pregnant Lafleur (fourth place in 2024) and Lucy Young (12th). The top 22 all broke the one-hour mark last year, shattering the record of 15 from 2022.

Even with a busy race calendar, Rhodes can’t pass up the spectacle of Mount Marathon.

“Getting the win last year, I felt a sense of relief knowing I could take a year off if I wanted to. When registration came around though, I never considered for even a moment that I wouldn’t show up!” Rhodes said. “There’s no better way to spend the 4th of July than in Seward! I’ve had both good days and bad days at this race, but have yet to feel anything but love for everything Mount Marathon is!”

If Rhodes is to repeat, she will have to earn it. Kramer, runner-up in 2024, is back with proven uphill chops; she could contend for the title if she speeds up on the downhill or builds a big enough lead on the uphill.

“I definitely maximize uphill for risk mitigation on the downhill,” said Kramer, a member of the U.S. Ski Team with Winter Olympic aspirations.

And while her downhill in 2024 took 14:59 (compared to 13:22 for Rhodes), Kramer does see a potential path to victory.

“If I’m far enough ahead or have a gap on the uphill, I am comfortable enough on the downhill now that I can maintain my place,” she said.

Then there’s the Palmer trio:

- Christy Marvin is a three-time champ who has finished top five in all 11 of her Mount Marathon races. Now 44, she has been hampered by injuries in recent years but appears in good form after winning the Government Peak Up-Down race on June 7.
- Denali Foldager-Strabel, who grew up in Seward, won the junior girls race three times, holds the women’s fastest downhill time (11:27) and has seven top-five women’s finishes but no victories.
- Meg Inokuma, 45, set the 40-49 age-group record in 2024 of 51:59 while placing third.

Top newcomers include Kalie McCrystal, an accomplished Skyrunner, and Katarina Kuba, a talented ski mountaineer. Both hail from Squamish, British Columbia.

“Both Kalie and Katerina possess high levels of proficiency in technical terrain,” said Jessie McCauley, a men’s racer from Squamish. “(They) have the aerobic engines and the skills necessary to take on MMR.”

Novie McCabe, a Nordic skiing Olympian, looks to improve on her eighth place from 2022.

This year’s logo contest winner is no slouch on the mountain, either: Katey Houser of Palmer, who skis at Montana State University, is back to defend her 10th place finish from 2024.

On the longevity front, Ellyn Brown of Anchorage and Patti Foldager of Hope are going for their 42nd finish and Yereth Rosen aims for her 33rd. And Maureen McCrea is back after becoming the oldest female finisher in 2024 at age 80.

The non-binary division, implemented last year, returns Zoe Dohring, who was second last year. They will be joined by Linnea Dohring of Anchorage and Ace Wilder of Tucson, Ariz. The trio will participate in the women’s event but have separate results in the non-binary division.

Is Norris Untouchable, Even With a Crazy Fast Field?

With five wins in five tries, two questions must be asked: Is David Norris untouchable at Mount Marathon? And although he’s already running quicker than anyone imagined, can he go even faster?

Spurred by an unfathomable sub-30 minute ascent from Seward’s 4th Avenue to the top of Mount Marathon, Norris last year shattered his own record from 2016 by 49 seconds, finishing in 40 minutes, 37 seconds.

For context, the record Bill Spencer set in 1981 of 43:21 lasted 32 years, and now Norris has gone nearly three minutes faster.

And while Norris says he isn’t eager to “risk life and limb” to improve his record, he’s been working on his road speed this season and believes that may help him inch closer to the sub-40-minute mark at Mount Marathon. In May, his improved speed paid dividends at the U.S. Mountain Running Championships in New Hampshire — at a much less technical race than Mount Marathon — where he qualified to represent the USA at the World Trail Running Championships in Spain this September.

“(At Mount Marathon) if I could still descend in that 10-minute-and-change range and then improve the pavement section and maybe a few seconds on the uphill, that would kind of make the difference,” Norris said. “So we’ll see.”

Norris could also benefit if a large snowfield remains near the top of the mountain, a distinct possibility given Seward’s persistently chilly weather this spring. Running or butt-sliding down snow can be considerably faster than negotiating rock and scree.

Despite facing arguably the strongest field in men’s race history — the top 18 from 2024 are slated to return along with some talented newcomers — Norris is in a class of his own. In 2024, Norris won by 2:15 over 44-year-old Max King of Bend, Ore., whose 42:52 was exceptionally fast in its own right. (King is returning in 2025 but says he’s not in peak form following meniscus surgery).

Canadian Jessie McAuley and California brothers Ali Papillon and Bodhi Gross — former Alaskans — also broke the 45-minute benchmark, a time that until 2010 virtually guaranteed victory.

Norris grew up in Fairbanks, lived in Anchorage as an elite Nordic ski racer and now resides in Steamboat Springs, Colo. What keeps bringing him back to Mount Marathon?

“Outside of the race, it’s the excuse to come see friends and family,” Norris said on June 5 while at the Alaska Sports Hall of Fame induction ceremony, where he accepted the men’s Pride of Alaska award. “(For the race) nothing else compares to it with how raw it is, the fans that are all there. The day itself is so exciting. It’s so steep, so gnarly. It’s so fun.”

McAuley, the Canadian from Squamish, British Columbia, also recognizes Mount Marathon as something special. He improved to third last year in 44:02 after taking sixth in his 2019 debut.

“Mount Marathon is without question the most technical trail-running race in North America,” said McAuley, who represents Arc’teryx, which signed on as a new Mount Marathon sponsor in 2025. “I have always excelled at steep, rugged and fast ascents and descents. MMR is all of that packed into a short effort.”

The 97 years of history is also not lost on McAuley. “I strongly value the sense of community and deep history of the event,” he said. “There’s nothing quite like it on our side of the globe.”

The question remains: can anyone beat, or even closely challenge, Norris?

“I think if (Norris) has a smooth race it is unlikely for someone to go faster. Especially with his knowledge of racing MMR,” McAuley said. “However, it’s racing. You never know.”

The roster also includes Jeret Gillingham of Bellingham, Wash., who took sixth as a rookie in 2024. Four others — Nevada resident Darren Thomas and

Alaskans Michael Earnhart, Lars Arneson and Lyon Kopsack — all have top-five finishes on their resumes but slipped to 7th to 10th place in 2024.

Arneson, a multi-time Alaska Mountain Runners Grand Prix series champion, is juggling parental duties for his newborn son.

“It’s been a blast taking Wout up some local peaks, but we’ve been sticking closer to home and I haven’t been in the mountains nearly as much as I normally am this time of year,” said Arneson, adding that he hopes more biking this spring may translate into mountain speed.

There are also several past Top 10 performers returning to the race after missing 2024. Bayton Menton of Oregon, Zack Bursell of Juneau, Ben Marvin of Palmer and Taylor Turney of Anchorage — who blitzed a record 9:54 downhill in 2023 — fall into that category.

Then there are highly touted rookies like William McGovern of Anchorage (winner of the 2025 Turnagain Arm Trail Race) and former professional skier Braden Becker of Yarmouth, Maine.

And don’t forget Coby Marvin, the three-time junior boys champion who is aging into the men’s race. Marvin owns the second-fastest junior time in history and is no stranger to longer mountain efforts.

There’s a field of 150 Seward racers in the junior, women’s and men’s events combined. The top men’s performer from Seward could again come down to a battle between James Carlberg, Pyper Dixon and Erik Johnson, who finished within seconds of one another last year in 16th, 17th and 18th places, respectively.

On the longevity front, Braun Kopsack is going for his 47th finish, Everett Billingslea his 43rd, Steven “Crazy Billy” Carroll his 43rd and Lance Kopsack his 41st.

Fred Moore of Seward, 85, tops them all and might chase his 55th consecutive finish; his streak began in 1970.

Not to be outdone, 89-year-old Chad Resari of Anchorage is again entered as a Golden Racer, which awards a finish for racers over age 70 who cover half the mountain. Last year he finished in 1:49:11 and high-fived fans on the homestretch.

Only 71 entrants exceed the age of 60 but Mark Tatum of Colorado is among the most acclaimed; perhaps he’ll challenge Barney Griffith’s 60-69 age group mark of 53:34. While Mount Marathon is the oldest mountain race in North America, the Dipsea in California is the oldest trail race, and Tatum has the rare distinction of winning the age- and gender-handicapped race as a non-Californian.

Of the 1,064 runners still entered on June 7, 900 hailed from Alaska (84.6 percent). The rest came from three other countries — Canada, Germany and France — and 31 other states.

Running for Loved Ones: The Conant, Green and Willman Families

By Beth Bragg
Laura Conant's streak of six straight Mount Marathons ended in 2007 when she was 52. She swore she'd never do the race again and yet here she is, 70 years old and ready for her seventh race.
Talon Sturgill has never done Mount Marathon, mostly because summers in Seward have often meant long days fishing Resurrection Bay with his big family. But this Fourth of July will find him on the mountain, a race rookie at age 31.

Harper said by email. "It's really fun to see the people that knew him realize that I'm his kid and they're like, 'Your dad convinced me to do this race,' or 'Whoa, I never would've done this without him.'"
"I feel honored to be his child."
Conant's husband, Jim Conant, died earlier this year. He was a veteran of 21 Mount Marathons, with his most recent finish coming in 2018.
Both Conants celebrated milestone birthdays last year, family was rocked by tragedy — the loss of Sturgill's uncle, Josh Green, and two of his cousins, Caleb Green and Hayden Green. They died on a fishing trip last May when their boat capsized south of Seward, a place that for decades was one of the family's favorite destinations for summer fun.

"The last time we were here, everyone's heart was broken," Sturgill said.
He hopes to inspire some joy and good energy this year. Sturgill made a Green family tribute video to share with the family the week of the race, and on race day he'll don green shorts for his Mount Marathon debut.
Conant and Sturgill both gained entry to Mount Marathon via petition — one of the last resorts for runners seeking a bib in a race where participation is limited but interest is off the charts.
Unless a runner has earned priority status based on past results, they must enter a registration lottery. This year, 1,335 people entered the lottery and 405 scored one of the coveted race bibs.
If runners don't get in that way, they can try to buy their way in either through an online auction in April (six spots) or at the live auction the night before the race (14 spots).
Or they can petition the race committee for a one-time entry. This year the committee considered 16 petitions and approved 10; seven were merit-based — runners with a proven track record like Kendall Kramer of Fairbanks — and nine were based on unique circumstances.
Conant and Sturgill were among those awarded spots based on unique circumstances.
"Our entire family has been fishing out of, living in, or visiting Seward for the greater part of the last 50 years," Sturgill wrote in his petition. "We all attend this race every year. This year I humbly ask that you allow the Green family to honor these men that we lost last year."
Josh Green was like a second dad, Sturgill said, and Caleb and Hayden were more like brothers than cousins. Josh coached all three boys in wrestling — Caleb, his son, was a two-time state heavyweight champion at Bartlett High.
Sturgill said memories of working out with his cousins sustained him as he trained this winter.
"I keep finding myself in moments of time with these guys," he said, "like when I'm wearing a weighted vest on the stair-stepper. I'm ready to quit and I get an image of me and Hayden running up the mountain and down the mountain, or me and Caleb training for wrestling, and I think, 'They would never quit on you, don't you dare quit on them.'"
Conant, a longtime Seward resident, crossed her fingers that the race committee would approve her petition.
The race is part of her family's DNA, she said: "I've been a volunteer, a ton of the family runs the race, and the Fourth of July has always been a big thing to my family," she said.
She'll be among 10 family members racing Friday. Also entered are son Jimmy, daughter and son-in-law Amy and Ben Harper and grandchildren Ridge, Elsie, Belle, Cason, Charly and Ryah.

Talon Sturgill & Caleb Green

Conant and Sturgill are racing to honor loved ones. They will take their grief up the mountain and maybe come back down a little lighter having paid tribute in classic Mount Marathon fashion — with blood, sweat and tears.
"Lots of tears, probably," Conant said.
In Friday's junior race, Anchorage teenagers Harper and Ruby Willman will run with full hearts on a mountain beloved by their dad. Dan Willman was a 20-time Mount Marathon finisher who was 49 when he died in January 2023 after a long illness.
"When we hike it now, I think of my dad not in a sad manner, but more like he is proud of me for doing this race he loves," inspiring them to take another shot at the race.

"I said I was never gonna do this race again, ever, and then we turned 70," Laura said. "We said, 'We climb mountains. Let's do it.'"
Jim died before race signups began. Three weeks later Laura decided to do the race anyway.
"I texted my kids, 'I want to be in this race. I want to race in Jim's honor,'" she said.
Around the same time, Sturgill was searching for a way to honor the extended Anchorage family that embraced him at age 12 when he was adopted by Nate and Gina Green.
Nate died in the summer of 2022, and two years later the

Brothers Josh and Nate Green

The Willman sisters will continue a family tradition started by their dad. Dan did his first race in 1999 and his last in 2019; their mom, Holly, owns 10 finishes.
Dan and Holly's fierce love of the outdoors is reflected in the names of their children. Harper is named after the glacier on Denali, Ruby is named after the Yukon River village, and son Brooks is named after the mountain range.
Dan's love of Mount Marathon was so intense that he twice slept on the steps of the Seward Chamber of Commerce the night before race registration opened so he'd be sure to get a bib.
"He loved being part of the community of runners every year — even to the point it was an agreement when we got married that I would fly him back to Alaska as long as we lived overseas," said Holly, whose work with BP took the couple to Russia from 2004-06.

Dan coaxed and inspired many to make Mount Marathon a goal. One year, his crowd-funding efforts allowed a couple to pay $2,000 for two bibs at the auction, Holly said.
At the 2023 race, a few months after Dan died, a number of runners wore signs on their backs featuring a photo of Dan descending Mount Marathon along with the question, "What would Willman do?"
"Well," said Holly, "Willman would run, regardless of any circumstances around him, and he'd encourage others to do so as well — to just get out to the mountains."

Sandal Man: Meet Ethan Copp

By Beth Bragg
Eschewing shoes wasn't always Ethan Copp's thing. One of the first times he went outside without shoes nearly put him in steel-toed boots for the rest of his life.

When he was a little kid he stepped on a bee. It hurt, and it conjured thoughts of other shoeless mishaps, like wading into a lake and getting stabbed by a fishing hook.

"I was a little paranoid," he said.

He grew out of it. These days, Copp, a 23-year-old from Palmer, races in sandals — barely-there flip-flops that offer scant protection from rocks, gravel, shale, scree, snow and water.

"It's an intimate experience because you have to be mindful and alert the whole way," he said. "It's almost meditative for me."

In his Mount Marathon debut last year, Copp placed 52nd in a pair of Earth Runners sandals that weigh 5.9 ounces and have soles about three-eighths of an inch thick.

He finished the race in 56 minutes, 10 seconds. Among his takeaways: Snow feels super-nice, medium-sized gravel does not, and sandals are great on shale.

"At Mount Marathon everyone is concerned about the shale," he said. "I'd rather go down barefoot or in sandals because the shale will take you right down. It doesn't cut you up as much as you think."

Copp's feet don't look gnarly: no scars, bruises or bulges. He cut one of his feet when he hit a rock in last year's Crow Pass Crossing, but damage is mostly limited to what he calls "small surface wounds."

Sandals have some advantages: They shed water easily, and the few rocks they collect easily pop out. And they elicit some memorable reactions: "It feels like I'm following Jesus," a nearby runner said at the start of one race.

But sandals at Mount Marathon? The race where runners go through rolls of duct tape wrapping the tops of their shoes so gravel won't get in and ankles won't give out?

The race known for loose rock, a terrifyingly steep downhill and technical running?

"Why sandals?" Copp said, anticipating the obvious question. "It's a way that works for me. We are our best gear, and sandals help me develop my own process."

Running in sandals, he said, "is a way to stay grounded and slow down and appreciate the terrain ... You just gotta relax into the ground and let it move through you."

Copp chose minimalism a few years ago after watching online video of a man who runs barefoot. His family influenced him too — he has an uncle who introduced him to Vibram FiveFingers shoes, and his dad spent a year working in Africa and often went barefoot there.

"That sort of gave me permission. Small little things that told me this is OK," he said.

Longtime race committee member Karol Fink said she doesn't know of anyone else who has raced Mount Marathon in sandals, "but I often see tourists on the mountain in Teva's or other poor shoe choices," she said by email. Metal cleats and microspikes are prohibited.

Copp raced in sandals for the first time at the 2020 Matanuska Peak Challenge, where he drew comments from spectators but no judgment.

"No one was like, 'That's wrong.' We were all there to do our thing and interact with the mountain and interact with each other," he said.

At the 2023 Resurrection 100 trail run, he made it 70 miles before he dropped out — not because of his feet, but because he didn't bring enough layers and he was cold and wet.

Copp wears work shoes for his job as a staff air quality scientist for SLR Consulting but it's strictly sandals when he races. A 2020 graduate of Palmer High School, he said he hasn't raced in shoes since his high school days.

"Before I was running to get a goal," he said. "Now it's way more about exploration and curiosity."

The Mini Mount Marathon Race

Created in 1989 by Kim and Skip Reiersen as a way to involve their 2-year-old daughter in Seward's Fourth of July festivities, the annual Mini Mount Marathon plants the seeds for new generations of young Mount Marathon racers.

It's open to children ages 2 to 6 and over the past 30 years thousands of children have participated, with many going on to race in the junior and senior divisions.

Today, the mini race is a beloved Fourth of July tradition and one of the most anticipated events of the day.

Petro Marine has been a sponsor for the Mini Mount Marathon Race since the beginning, each year supporting the race. A core group of long-time volunteers makes sure the mini race goes off without a hitch.

Mini Racer Round Up - July 4 at 10:50 a.m.
(down 4th Ave, away from the women's start)

Mini Racer Start - July 4 at 11:13 a.m.

THANK YOU PETRO MARINE!

Logo Winner!

Katey Houser is the winner of this year's logo contest for her hand-drawn design of a downhill racer facing Resurrection Bay. Houser, 21, is from Palmer and currently attends Montana State University, where she is a member of the cross country ski team. Houser's winning entry — which earned her $250 — is the first predominantly red, white and blue design since 2012. It will be printed on the 2025 racer and volunteer t-shirts and on other merchandise and promotional efforts. Houser has six Mount Marathon finishes — three as a junior and three as an adult — and placed 10th overall in the women's race in 2024. She's entered again this year. Isla Crouse of Kenai placed runner-up. The Mount Marathon Race Committee, which selected the winner, thanks all 20 artists who took part in the annual contest this year.

A Big Thank You to our Volunteers!

From traffic control to trail sweeping to racer check-in, every volunteer is vital for the success of our race. We literally could not do it without the hundreds of volunteers that help each year. The Seward Chamber of Commerce and Mount Marathon Race Committee would like to thank you for your commitment and care for our Mount Marathon racers and keeping our 4th of July Festival tradition alive!

FESTIVAL FUN!

The Annual July 4th Fireworks Display

Thank you to our 2025 fireworks display sponsors!

PLATINUM PARTNER

The fireworks display begins at 12:01 a.m. on July 4th, marking the official start of the holiday! It will start after the Boat Parade.

You can view the fireworks display just about anywhere in town, but some popular viewing spots include the Waterfront Park or the Seward Boat Harbor.

GOLD PARTNER

AS A REMINDER:

-Dogs are not allowed throughout the festival, so please leave them at home!

-Flying drones are prohibited

Also, be sure to collect all your belongings and garbage!

Thank you!

SILVER PARTNERS

Parades on land and sea!

BOAT PARADE - JULY 3RD AT 11 P.M.
Join us at the Seward 4th of July Boat Parade on July 3rd at 11 p.m. It will take place right before the fireworks display along the waterfront near the Seward Boat Harbor.

FLOAT PARADE - JULY 4TH AT 1 P.M.
On the afternoon of the 4th the streets are taken over by floats instead of runners as the parade makes its way through Seward's historic downtown and waterfront! Make sure you secure a spot before it begins at 1:00 p.m. on Friday, July 4th.

Sensitive to loud noises and sound? This year the first block of the parade along Second Avenue will be a QUIET ZONE for those who may not like the loud sounds of horns and sirens.
