

Welcome to Seward for the Fourth of July!

Welcome to Seward for the 96th running of the Mount Marathon Race, which has entertained and challenged racers since 1915, longer than any other mountain race in North America.

We're grateful to again present the race and festival on the Fourth of July.

Start times are 9 a.m. for juniors, 11 a.m. for men and 2 p.m. for women. And don't forget the exciting Mini Mount Marathon for 2-6-years-olds starting at 11:08 a.m.

Anywhere on Fourth Avenue or Jefferson Street is a popular place to watch the race (remember, no dogs or drones!), while the base of the mountain at the end of Lowell Canyon Road is also an exciting vantage point.

This year's roster includes a large number of lottery winners and first-time racers. Help give them a Mount Marathon welcome they'll never forget.

This guide features an event schedule, Fourth of July Festival information, great photos and rosters with bib numbers for each race. There's also an article about 80-year-old Maureen McCrea, a feature on Steve MacSwain and his childhood memories of Seward and the story about how Taylor Turney ran from the top of the mountain to the finish line in less than 10 minutes! You'll also find previews of all three races.

New this year: we have a permanent logo created by Moose Pass native Sarah Glaser and a non-binary division that features its own results and the same awards that men and women receive.

Whether you're a hardened Alaskan, a first-time visitor to Seward, a rookie racer or a veteran of the Mount Marathon Race, we're psyched you're here and wish you and your families an amazing experience.

Spectator Tips

With three races throughout the day, you'll have plenty of time to see the race from different vantage points. You can watch the start and finish on 4th Avenue, or head to Jefferson Street and see how racers tackle the mountain base.

For those who want to do some climbing of their own, spectators are invited on the trail, but please take the HIKING TRAIL, which starts at the intersection of 1st and Monroe Streets (also known as the Jeep Trail).

For the safety of all runners and spectators, NO DOGS, leashed or unleashed, are allowed in the downtown area or along the race course. This includes all race trails on the mountain.

There are NO DRONES allowed to be flown in and around the race course and downtown unless given prior approval.

Wherever you watch, be sure to obey race officials and volunteers. And definitely STAY OFF THE RACE TRAIL. Racers have trained hard for the Mount Marathon Race; don't be the person who messes up their day.

Getting Around Town

Visitors are encouraged to carpool or enjoy a scenic train ride from Anchorage to reduce the amount of traffic in town around the Fourth of July. Once here, hop on our free shuttle—maps are available at the Visitor Center—call a taxi, or rent a bike to get around. If you do have a car, park legally and avoid blocking private driveways.

For summer 2024, the City of Seward Free Shuttle will operate from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. with the first and last stops being at the Seward Railroad Depot. If there is a cruise ship in port, the shuttle will stop at the cruise ship terminal starting at 8 a.m.

The route takes about 30 minutes for the shuttle to complete. Be sure to look for the Seward City Tours bus with FREE SHUTTLE printed in red and use the designated shuttle stops.

Seward is compact and easy to navigate. The majority of activities and attractions are found within one mile of the boat harbor, so walking and biking—especially along the waterfront path—are quite feasible.

Juniors: Boonstra and Marvin Seek to Defend Titles

By Matias Saari MMR Race Director

Tania Boonstra's recipe for success is to climb as fast as possible and then hold off her pursuers on the downhill.

It worked for the Kenai runner last year when she built a 2 1/2-minute lead on the next-best climber (her sister Jayna) and then coasted to victory over Rose Conway of Anchorage in the Mount Marathon junior girls race. That flipped the script from 2022, when Conway won after chasing down Tania and Jayna Boonstra on the downhill.

"It was really awesome (to win) after being so close the year before," Tania said about 2023."I just really tried to push on the way up because I'm not as strong as the downhills.... (The downhill) is a little intimidating sometimes."

After a successful high

16-year-old took a couple weeks off and then participated in the Lynn Canal Training Camp in Juneau, which includes hiking, running, and other recreational activities.

With Jayna aging up to the women's race this year, Tania will lose the comfort of sisterhood in the junior event.

"It's fun to warm up with my sister," she said."But I'm excited for her to do the full course."

Pint-sized 12-year-old Wren Spangler took third last year and appears in good form again after placing eighth at the Government Peak up-and-down race on June 1, ahead of several women assigned to the adult first wave at Mount Marathon.

The top Seward junior is Olive Jordan, 14, who placed fourth last year after posting the fastest downhill split among 124 racers.

er (fifth last year) and Aubrey Virgin of Palmer (sixth last year) will also be pushing for the podium.

One potential advantage for Boonstra is that her father, Todd, is a three-time Olympian in Nordic skiing who won the Mount Marathon men's race four times. Presumably Tania can glean a few training and racing tips from him.

Boys race challenger Vebjorn Flagstad is in a similar boat as Tania Boonstra: his Norwegian father, Trond, is a two-time MMR champion.

"My dad has helped me a lot with this race," Flagstad said. "Last year I was able to use his routes to get up and down the cliff pretty fast and I'm hoping this year we will go out and do some of the workouts he did to train for Mount Marathon."

Flagstad's goal is to stay close to Coby Marvin, whose mom Christy has won Mount Marathon three times while father Ben has placed as high as fifth.

"It would be great to be able to hang with (Coby) for at least part of the race because last year I didn't see him at all on the uphill section," said Flagstad."I definitely think if I have him in sight it would be a lot easier to keep with him rather than just chasing someone way ahead of me."

In last year's mudfest, Marvin built a lead of 1:41 over Flagstad on the climb to the halfway point and wound up winning by that exact margin.

In 2022, Marvin posted the second-fastest junior boys time in race history at 25 minutes, 27 seconds to become the first boy within a minute of Bill Spencer's storied record of 24:30 from 1973. That's believed to be Alaska's longest-standing running record.

"It would be great to run fast and get close to Bill's record again," Marvin said."I think it's going to depend on conditions."

This will be Marvin's last chance to chase Spencer before he graduates to the men's race in 2025.

Marvin said his training has changed this year for two reasons: he's busier now after beginning work at AKtive Soles Performance Footwear on April I, and he's becoming addicted to whitewater kayaking.

"I try to go (kayaking) 3-4 times a week, preferably more," Marvin said. "So I try to usually get a (running) workout in before I go kayaking."

Other names to watch in the boys race include 15-yearold Raven Spangler of Palmer, the fastest downhiller in the field who placed fourth last year; talented skier Hatcher Menkens, who's making his MMR debut; up-and-comer Corbin Wilson of Palmer; and Robbie Annett, a state champion track runner who will likely lead the race to the base of the mountain.

The junior field of up to 300 runners — boys and girls run together but are separated in the results — also features four quartets: the Rubeos from Wasilla, Shahas from Eagle River, Sensabaughs from Palmer, and Mehls from Eagle River all have four junior racers entered.

Men's: Can King Keep Up With Norris?

Max King and David Norris have dominated Mount Marathon since 2018, but King says it's time for a new King of the Mountain.

"My hope is that we'll see a few other young studs up there giving Norris a run for his money," said King, the two-time champion from Bend, Ore. "It's pretty cool that Norris or I have won the past 5 years it's been held, but I'd love to see someone new take the crown. We're not going to make it easy, though."

Despite their dominance, Norris and King have only gone head-to-head once, in 2018, and that duel produced the third- and fourth-fastest times in race history (42 minutes, I3 seconds for Norris and 42:33 for King).

"A lot has changed since then, as in I got old," quipped King, now 44. Age is hardly an impediment for Age is narray an impediment for King, who earned not only the 40-49 age group record in 2022 but the win with a sterling time of 43:37.

"As I've aged, I've noticed that recovery is slower so getting the consistent hard workouts in to get really fit is just more difficult," said King, who must drive two hours just to climb a 3,000 vertical foot mountain.

Norris, the Fairbanks native who lived and trained in Anchorage with the Alaska Pacific University Nordic Ski Center before moving to Steamboat Springs, Colo., has a similar challenge.

"Steamboat is a great location to train in, but it is really tough to find the steep terrain that is the norm in southcentral Alaska," he said.

Any lack of vertical training, though, doesn't seem to be adversely affecting the pair, and Norris is looking forward to racing King again.

"I think a great battle would be good for both of us, but I haven't put too much thought on my competition," Norris said. "My main objective is to pursue a personal best time on the course."

A new personal best would mean a new race record. Norris achieved legendary status with his record run of 41:26 seconds in 2016, when he returned the record to an Alaskan a year after Spanish star Kilian Jornet had swiped it.

Norris knows good conditions are necessary for record-challenging times, and last year's mud and rain slowed most everyone down. A large snowfield near the top can also help produce fast times as racers butt-slide down the snow at breakneck speeds while giving their legs a short break. Whether snow remains come July 4 is anybody's guess.

Though Norris has moved to Colorado, where he coaches Nordic skiing and works as an accountant and banker, he relishes returning most years to Mount Marathon.

"It is easily the gnarliest mountain race I have ever done, even though it is only a 5 km!," Norris said. "The other big reason I come back to Seward is because it's an amazing excuse to spend time with my family in Alaska and to stay connected with the running community in Alaska."

Darren Thomas of Reno, Nev., is also back and seeks the top step of the podium after placing second last year and third in 2021.

Last year's third- through fifth-place finishers, Lars Arneson, Michael Earnhart and Lyon Kopsack, respectively, also return. Arneson, a four-time champion of the Alaska Mountain Runners' Grand Prix series, continues to excel with wins this season at Crazy Lazy and the Turnagain Arm Trail Run and a runner-up result at the Knoya Ridge Run. Earnhart, a 21-year-old elite skier, made a huge leap from 14th in 2022 to fourth last year.

Further intrigue in this year's field comes from no fewer than half a dozen racers who missed the 2023 event.

That group consists of past junior champion Michael Connelly of Eagle River (fourth in 2021); Jessie McAuley of British Columbia, Canada (sixth in 2019); Ali Papillon, now of Manitou Springs, Colo., who holds the third-fastest junior time in history and will be making his men's race debut; past record-holder Eric Strabel, 42, who simply aims to break 50 minutes this year; University of Alaska Anchorage All-America runner Cole Nash; and Christopher Brenk, a speedy marathoner from Sitka who deferred his entry last year due to injury.

Being speedy is not a prerequisite for being notable, however.

Visually impaired runner Rennick Heatwole, a seven-time finisher of the junior race, will run his first men's event this year.

Tyler Johnson, an Inupiaq runner from Nome, is back for the second time.

New to Mount Marathon as a lottery winner is Cam Stones, who won a bronze medal for Canada in the four-man bobsled at the 2022 Winter Olympics.

But the longest applause at the awards ceremony will likely be reserved for octogenarians Fred Moore and Chad Resari. Moore, an 83-year-old from Seward, returns for his 54th consecutive race, an astounding record that may never be broken. And last year Resari finished as a "Golden Racer" by completing half the mountain in under two hours; he's signed up for another attempt this year, tackling one of the country's most difficult mountain runs — at age 88.

Of the 1,015 runners still entered on the 9th of June, 874 of them hailed from Alaska (86 percent). The rest came from 28 states in the U.S. along with a handful from Canada, Norway and the United Kingdom.

Women's: Fierce and Friendly Defines Women's Race

Can the Palmer power trio sweep again?

Christy Marvin, Meg Inokuma and Denali Strabel pulled off a 1-2-3 finish in 2023, but a repeat of that performance from the little town in the MatSu Valley seems unlikely given the strong competition and an injury to last year's champion.

Last year, Marvin overtook Meg Inokuma on Jefferson Street for her third win and 10th Top 3 finish in 10 attempts. At 42, she also became the second-oldest women's champion, denying the 43-year-old Inokuma of that honor. Strabel, 34, a Seward native and new Palmer resident, placed an emotional third.

But this year may be different. In early June, Strabel was confident in her fitness after a runner-up performance at the Turnagain Arm Trail Run and Inokuma was coming off a strong ascent at the Government Peak Climb. But Marvin was sidelined with plantar fasciitis (a foot injury) and two types of tendonitis.

"I do plan to race MMR even if I have to take the week before and after off," Marvin texted June 6 while camping in Seward. "I've been doing a lot of biking, some slower hiking, and a few other random cross training options."

Marvin, who trained regularly with Strabel this winter, thrives on the female camaraderie so evident in mountain running these days.

"I'm beyond excited to be a part of a group of ladies who are chasing records and breaking down barriers in women's mountain running. We can do great things alone, but incredible things together," Marvin said.

Strabel echoed the "stronger together" sentiment.

"It is an honor to be part of the group building this example of loving and supporting other women. It's magical to bring women along with you and generate this sisterhood in the mountains," Strabel said. "I also don't limit this supporting mindset to the 'top' women. I want to create a space where everyone feels supported."

A three-time winner of the junior race at Mount Marathon, Strabel has seven Top-5 finishes in the women's race but has yet to join her mother, Patti Foldager, on the winners' list. Holder of the women's downhill record, Strabel believes she can improve on her personal best of 52 minutes and would no doubt be in the mix if she accomplishes that.

Meanwhile, Inokuma says she simply enjoys spending time in the mountains. She doesn't train specifically for races and rarely wears a watch in competition. Although she was first to the top of Mount Marathon last year and nearly held off Marvin, she's not driven to try to win races. "As long as I push myself as much as I can, that's my personal win," she said.

There is no shortage of other contenders.

Two-time champion Hannah Lafleur of Seward missed last year's race due to pregnancy and is now racing again with a toddler in tow.

World Mountain and Trail Running Championships in Austria; she has been racing throughout the U.S. in recent years and claimed the Knoya Ridge Run in Anchorage on June 6.

Eagle River newcomers Shauna Severson and Campbell Peterson could make waves along with Rosie Fordham, a standout skier and runner at the University of Alaska Fairbanks who hails from Australia.

Speaking of the land Down Under, Jessica Yeaton — the 2018 Mount Marathon champion twice represented Australia at the Winter Olympics in Nordic skiing. She graduated high school in Anchorage and now works as a physical therapist in Steamboat Springs, Colo. Unfortunately, her participation in Mount Marathon is doubtful due to serious injuries sustained in a snowmachining accident in early April.

"I wasn't able to train or work for about six weeks," Yeaton said, adding that she'll only race, despite lacking peak fitness, if she's fully confident that won't cause a setback in her recovery.

Also signed up yet again are Patti Foldager of Hope and Ellyn Brown of Anchorage. They were the first women to complete 40 races in 2023 and that accomplishment will be recognized at this year's awards ceremony.

"My mother has alway been a pioneer in my eye

"My mother has always been a pioneer in my eyes. She won the first women's only race in 1985," Denali Strabel said about Foldager. "(She) has always shown me what patience and determination can produce. I'm honored to run alongside her."

Also worthy of celebration is Tali Novakovich, who will be the youngest possible age to participate in the women's race: her 18th birthday is on the Fourth of July.

The 2024 races also marks the launching of a non-binary division. Zoe Dohring of Anchorage and Madi Sudweeks of Utah will participate among women while Heath McTee of Texas will race with the men. The non-binary entrants will have their own results and receive the same awards as the men's and women's divisions.

McCrea Seeks to Become First Octogenarian Female Finisher

By Beth Bragg

Maureen McCrea doesn't want to be a golden oldie. Just an oldie.

The 80-year-old Anchorage woman is trying to become the oldest woman to finish Mount Marathon, the race up and down the 3,022-foot slab of rock that bruises, batters and bloodies runners of all ages.

In 2019 organizers added a "golden racer" division to make the brutal race more accessible for people over 70 by letting them climb halfway up the mountain and turn around at the same place the under-18 junior racers do.

But McCrea is saying no thanks to the golden opportunity. She wants to run the full race.

A four-time finisher, McCrea is back for the first time since 2015, when she won the 70-79 age group for the second straight year. She's ready to make a bid at history, so she rejected the idea of racing in the golden division when race director Matias Saari told her about it earlier this year.

"Matias said, 'Are you sure? You can turn around halfway.' And I said, 'Try me when I'm 90,' "McCrea said.

Race day will be a reunion for the McCrea-Pautzke clan, members of which have been running Mount Marathon since 2007. A dozen plan to be there to honor McCrea's milestone birthday; six plan to race and six plan to

"My husband wants it to be a big party," McCrea said. "He's the instigator."

McCrea and husband Clarence Pautzke have been climbing mountains in Alaska since they moved here in 1980. Before that they were climbing in Washington, where they met in 1972 when both were graduate students at the University of Washington.

Their first date was a hike up Sauk Mountain in the Cascade Range, a four-mile roundtrip with an elevation gain of 1,200 feet.

"He called me up and said, 'How would you like to go glissading?"

McCrea didn't know what glissading was, but she was game.

"We get to the top and he says, 'Now let's go.' I say, 'What?' And he says, 'You're skiing on your feet.' I came down sitting between his legs," she said.

Pautzke was studying oceanography and McCrea was studying fisheries and marine science, and good jobs awaited when they came to Alaska. Pautzke worked as the executive director of the North Pacific Fisheries Management Council and the North Pacific Research Board, and McCrea worked in coastal management for the Outer Continental Shelf (OCS) Alaska Region and the state of Alaska and was a founding member of the Anchorage Waterways Council.

The couple raised two kids, daughter Sarah of Hawaii and son Brian of Girdwood, and live an adventurous life with lots of sailing in Prince William Sound and hiking in the Chugach Mountains.

The whole family raced in 2015, and when they were done McCrea, a four-time finisher, and Sarah, a three-time finisher, figured their race careers were over.

"My knees were so bad and she can't train properly in Hawaii, so we said we won't do it again," McCrea said. "And then I got new knees!"

She had her left knee replaced in 2019 and her right knee replaced in 2021, and by last year she was climbing again. As her 80th birthday approached this May, Mount Marathon beckoned.

Among those joining McCrea will be Clarence, a 12-time finisher, and Brian, a 14-time finisher. Sarah, niece Kate Wright of Montana and Brian's wife Pamela Hatzis also plan to race, while McCrea's brother and sister-inlaw from Seattle will watch, as will four grandchildren.

McCrea gained entry through the lottery but the other three women didn't. They'll need to secure entries at the bib auction the night before the race, where only seven women's bibs are available and the demand for them can mean bidding wars and four-figure prices.

"That part is Clarence's show," McCrea said.

Her part is beating the 2.5-hour time limit and making Mount Marathon history.

By Beth Bragg

Few are born to run Mount Marathon quite like rookie runner Steve MacSwain, even though it's taken him nearly 59 years to take on the challenge.

Many know MacSwain as a hockey player. His knack for scoring goals made him a trailblazer of Alaska hockey in the 1980s and 1990s — the first Alaskan to play for Team USA at the World Championships, the first Alaskan to sign an NHL contract and, as a Minnesota Gopher, one of the first Alaskans to play for a college hockey powerhouse.

But MacSwain's story begins in Seward, in the most Alaska sort of way.

His parents grew up in Seward, and on Aug. 8, 1965, young Linda McRae went into labor several weeks before her due date. The timing was rot-Salmon Derby and seemingly everyone was out on a boat in Resurrection Bay.

"They were going down to the beach with a foghorn, sending the message, 'Linda McRae's having a baby; get the word out," MacSwain says, recalling an oft-told piece of family history. "Dr. Merritt Starr was an Anchorage doctor and he got the message. He was out fishing and went straight to the hospital and he delivered me in his hipboots."

He weighed 5 pounds, 14

up and down the chute with

But life intervened. Linda McRae married Steve Mac-Swain, and when their son was 5 they moved to Anchorage. Though there were many return visits to Seward, MacSwain was not happy when they had to go back to Anchorage.

"It would take me to nearly Moose Pass before I'd stop whining," he said.

Things changed once he learned to skate and fell in love with hockey. Thoughts of Mount Marathon waned.

But now, with his parents growing older and his dad battling cancer, MacSwain wants to honor his family's ties to Seward. He petitioned the race committee for a coveted spot in the race and was granted an entry based on unique circumstances.

On race day he hopes to find a spot near the bottom of the mountain where his parents, his wife Claudia, his son Stevie and other relatives can watch the race.

The logistics will be difficult Stevie, 30, was diagnosed with leukemia at age 2 and developed a seizure disorder that left him non-verbal and often in a wheelchair. But nothing has been easy about MacSwain's return to Mount Marathon.

"I didn't realize how out of shape I was, but I'm getting that feeling again, the training, and the pain," he said. He has significant hip and knee issues from all the years he played hockey, "and as much as it hurts, I'm loving it."

MacSwain has never been to the top of Mount Marathon, and he has never done any other mountain races. A training trip to Seward left him with cuts on his hand and the realization he needs a good pair of gloves. Training runs on Flattop in Anchorage tell him he still has work to do.

"Realistically this is a big challenge for me," he said. "I may not win this challenge, but I plan to battle and get to the top of that mountain for once, then hug my family and get to that finish line and then go get a shot at the Flamingo (Lounge). I think I'm gonna need a shot."

Mission Accomplished: Taylor Turney's Sub-10 Downhill

By Beth Bragg

What goes up must come down.

The way he sees it, the punishing 3,022-foot climb up the mountain is a necessary exertion for the ultimate exhilaration: A breakneck descent. "You deal with the uphill to get the thrill of the downhill," he said.

Few know that thrill quite like Turney. Last year, the 29-yearold Anchorage firefighter registered the fastest known time for a Mount Marathon downhill — 9 minutes, 54 seconds from the top of the mountain to the downtown finish line, a distance of about 1.5 miles, including the final half-mile or so on pavement.

Turney became the first to officially break the 10-minute downhill barrier on a wet, muddy day when no one else broke the 11-minute mark. The speedy descent vaulted him from 22nd place at the top of the mountain to ninth place at the finish line (total time: 48:45), giving him a record he has pursued since missing it by one second in his 2019 debut.

"I really trust my feet," Turney said. "When I'm out training by myself, the downhill is exhilarating for me. I have a ton of fun doing it. Every time I'm in the mountains I run as fast as I can on the downhills." On the list of the fastest Mount Marathon descents, Turney appears four times in the top five, with his 9:54 knocking Eric Strabel off the top of the list. (Strabel's wife, Denali, holds the women's fastest downhill of 11:27 from 2018.)

Eric Strabel did the downhill in 10:00 in 2013, when he ran 42:55 to break Bill Spencer's revered course record of 43:23 from 1981. Split times only go back to 1989, so there is no official record for downhill times by Spencer and others who competed in the first six decades of Mount Marathon. Turney has been seeking a sub-10:00 ever since he paid $1,600 at the 2019 bib auction and got his money's worth with a 10:01 downhill. Then came a 10:04 in 2021 and a 10:05 in 2022.

During those years Turney -- a Service High grad who ran for UAA -- switched careers from civil engineer to firefighter and had three kids with wife Kristyn. Through it all, he kept thinking about the 10-minute

"Every year I thought it was possible, but there are so many variables — the condition of the mountain, the people around you," he said.

"It felt special to get it. Going under 10 minutes is a really cool marker, but like any athlete, at the end it felt super great but I knew there were little things I could improve." Taylor is an annual favorite for the Downhill Demon Award given to the fastest to plummet from the rock at Race Point to the finish line. For others in search of fast descents, Turney offers a couple of tips:

-- "I tell people that taking quicker, lighter steps is really important. Every time your foot touches the ground it sends a message to your brain about where you are and how you're doing and how comfortable you are. If you feel fear, you're not going to go faster, so if you increase your cadence you're giving your body more information to know where you are on the ground."

-- "Airplane arms. They should come out wide for balance rather than keeping them at your sides."

technique and practice matters a lot."

Turney's next goal is to see how many times he can break the 10-minute mark. He wonders if a 9:30 is possible, but he knows it won't happen for him this year. In late May, he broke his shoulder when he tumbled and rolled into a boulder while teaching a downhill running course.

And so thoughts of another sub-10:00 are on hold this year. Just getting to the start line will be an uphill battle for the downhill specialist.

Rockin' & Rollin' Through the Decades

The Seward Chamber of Commerce will host two parades during the festival. On the eve of the Fourth. be sure to head on over to the Seward Boat Harbor to watch our Boat Parade. It will start at II p.m. The next day we will host the traditional float parade through our downtown inbetween the men's and women's Mount Marathon Race. You can vote for your favorite in each parade by scanning the QR code shown.

Boat Parade - July 3rd at 11 p.m.
Theme: Rockin' & Rollin' Through The Decades

The Boat Parade will take place right before the fireworks display along the waterfront near the Seward Boat Harbor. The theme this year is Rockin' & Rollin' Through the Decades. Rock on with the boat passengers and don't forget to vote for your favorite themed boat!

Float Parade - July 4th at 1 p.m. Theme: America Through The Decades

For a short period, the streets are taken over by floats instead of runners as the parade makes its way through Seward's historic downtown and waterfront. Many organizations in town contribute a float! Make sure you secure a spot before it begins at 1:00 p.m. on Thursday, July 4th.

Sensitive to loud noises and sound?
The first block of the parade, from AVTEC on Second Ave. until Madison St., there will be a QUIET ZONE for those who may not like the sound of loud horns and sirens.
Look for the signs as shown here.

Look for these signs along Second Avenue

Introducing the Mount Marathon Permanent Logo

MOUNT MARATHON
NORTH AMERICA'S OLDEST MOUNTAIN RACE

The Mount Marathon
Race now has a permanent logo created by Moose Pass native Sarah Glaser.The core logo is red, white and blue and shows the letter M in the shape of two mountain summits. It includes an outline of the race trail and a tsunami wave as a nod to Seward's maritime location.The logo package includes multiple iterations of the words Mount Marathon combined with the logo. "With this logo, we wanted to create a modern, enduring symbol of the rugged, exciting nature of the race — while celebrating Mount Marathon's amazing geography," Glaser said. The logo will be used for merchandise, signage, promotion, a new start banner, and a myriad of other purposes. MMR will still hold the annual logo contest. Glaser grew up in Moose Pass just outside of Seward and first participated in the Mount Marathon Race at age 14. She's completed 10 adult races with a best of 11th place in 2014. "I love that the event is an excellent motivation to climb mountains and celebrate running," Glaser said.

Don't Miss the Mini Mount Marathon Race

Mini Racer Round Up -July 4 at 10:50 a.m. (Meet by First National Bank)

Mini Racer Start - July 4 at 11:08 a.m.

The Mini Mount Marathon Race started more than 30 years ago and is still a huge highlight of race day. It was created in 1989 by Sewardites Kim and Skip Reierson as a way to involve their 2-year-old daughter in Seward's Fourth of July festivities.

The annual Mini Mount Marathon Race provides insight on our future racers and fuels the next generation of athletes.

Any children aged 2 to 6 years old may enter the race and over the past 30 years, thousands of children have participated, with many going on to race in the junior and senior divisions.

Petro Marine has been a sponsor for the Mini Mount Marathon Race since the beginning. A core group of long-time volunteers makes sure this mini race goes off without a hitch.

Thank you, Petro Marine!

Thank you, volunteers!

Every year we have hundreds of volunteers that are vital to the success of this race and festival.

The Seward Chamber of Commerce and Mount Marathon Race Committee would like to thank each volunteer for their commitment to the Mount Marathon racers and keeping our Fourth of July Festival tradition alive!
